

Caring friendship grows into a medical-care practice

By Justin Breen

Doctors Garrell Dekayle and Chantale Stephens-Archer's roots are in the Caribbean, South America and Africa, and their life journeys have led through Chicago and its west and south suburbs. They're best friends and big success stories, and they're now teaming up in a South Loop specialty medical practice.

Friends since meeting at the University of Chicago, they tested their friendship as roommates, on the way to becoming the first doctors in their families. Now they're business partners, too, co-owners of the new practice, Quench Wellness, 1319 S. Michigan Ave. The practice focuses on a variety of services, including intravenous vitamin infusions, hormone replacement and vaginal laser therapy.

"We respect each other, and we're accountable to each other, whether it's been to college, medical school, in relationships or even working out together," said Dekayle. "She's like my accountability partner. That has strengthened our friendship, and it also has helped with our business."

The new wellness practice's catchy name relates to one of its core treatments. "The name Quench literally comes from the concept of quenching your thirst," Dekayle said.

The fact remains, with the busy American lifestyle, it can be challenging to get in the amount of water, vitamins and nutrients the body needs to fuel all that it needs to do. Dehydration, and furthermore vitamin depletion, is a huge barrier on our health, both personally and as a society. IV infusions allow essential vitamins and nutrients to bypass the harsh environment of the stomach.

"We respect each other,

Dr. Garrell Dekayle (left) and Dr. Chantale Stephens-Archer at their new South Loop practice. (Quench Wellness photo)

BINGO EVERY THURSDAY @ 630 p.m.

St. Barbara's Church
2859 S. THROOP (at Archer Ave.) CHICAGO IL
$500 COVERALL
TIC-TAC "SUPER-STRIP"
NEW PLAYERS $10 OFF
with this coupon. Expires 10/18.
SUNDAY MASS 6:00 AM, 9:30 AM, SATURDAY 5 PM

PAY LESS FOR CELL PHONE SERVICE AND EARN FREE SERVICE TOO!
AND MAKE MONEY!

BIG MONEY-EARN $1700 BONUS
HUGE INCOME POTENTIAL.
NO TIME TO WASTE!

CALL OR TEXT PAUL 215-872-7770
PAULDOSBORNE.MYSTREAM.COM

that each would attend the school in the fall. They were roommates all four years and for several years after graduation while in separate medical schools. Their own mortality also led them to co-found BestieMD, a platform that aims to empower women through health education in a reliable and sturdy level.

"Part of the reason I started this business was I'm helping my daughter see what going after your dreams looks like," Stephens-Archer said.

Quench's success didn't stop at the latest evolution in their friendship.

"It's more basic than medical school because there's no roadmap for being a successful business person, but Garrell and I are going to give it our all," Stephens-Archer said.

Stephens-Archer said Quench will give her a chance to continue to educate and empower people and give her patients another way of looking at health maintenance and well-being.

"I look at medicine and see doctors prescribing pills, and I wanted to do something different," Stephens-Archer said. "This business is a passion project, and the more I do it, the more empowered and energized I feel."

Dekayle said Quench allows her another outlet for her creative, artistic side.

"It's not a type of person who's comfortable doing only one thing," Dekayle said. "I never thought of myself as just a doctor. I've always done more than what I expected of myself."

And even as they live about an hour's drive apart now,

Dekayle loves Hyde Park for its mix of artists, college students and eclectic people who have been living there for decades. Stephens-Archer adores Elmhurst because it's family oriented, comfortable and her daughters already have a ton of friends just on their block — their friendship remains as close as ever.

"Being this together, it makes things a lot easier,"

Dekayle said. "But more than that, it's making our piece of the world a little better and healthier."

Families of first responders face stress as well

By Kevin Bease

staff reporter

For Department

Police officers, she said, deal with equally difficult issues and, at times, the anger and violence comes their way on a call.

Her husband, who had been a Lombard firefighter/paramedic for less than a year, was on the other end of the line and told her to go check on their newborn daughter.

"I was like 'It's 3 o'clock in the morning. He's awake. Just go do it. I need you to do it before I can get back to the job,'" Willis remembers.

Her husband, Tom, had just experienced his first SIDS (Sudden Infant Death Syndrome) death as a paramedic.

He said that was just one of a number of horrific events her husband experienced while part of the Lombard Fire Department when he would come home after dealing with a difficult scene.

"He would come home with things and not be ready to talk about them," she said. "Having never been in the field, you don't understand what they go through."

She said that changed over time and her husband began to open up more about issues and used her as a sounding board.

"I was able to know when he wanted to talk and when he did not want to talk," Willis said.

Those years became part of the family, Willis said.

Although married for eight years, her husband is still active with the Lombard Fire Department's hook and ladder.

She said that her marriage

Call for Help

Below is a series looking at the trauma first responders deal with and the impact it has on them and their families.

State Rep. Kathleen Willis (D-Addison) talks during an October state hearing about being the wife of a former first responder. She said the state needs to do more to support first responders and their families. (blawilson@tribune.com)

Start your CAREER as a BARBER today

We provide the finest training in Barbering
Denmark College

Financial Aid to Those Who Qualify!
214 S. Wabash Ave.
CHICAGO, IL
visit us at: www.denmarkcollege.edu

FREE SHOPPER COUPON
$4.00 HAIRCUT
TUESDAY & WEDNESDAY
ONE HAIRCUT COUPON PER VISIT
MAY BE USED TWICE DURING THIS MONTH

Call Today
1-844-723-2737